Hymie's revenge

Today one suicidal love puppet's dream has come true. I, Hymie, do hereby attest to the fact that the publication of this issue of The Crudesatyr is the fulfillment of my life's ambition. D. M. Bomar, these sixteen pages are my revenge.

Every time you cast me to the ground from that second-story window, I planned another libelous article which would make you cringe.

When you allowed Paul to nearly decapitate me, I knew that someday I would exact revenge by having my picture plastered on the Back Page, where you would like to see an ad.

The many scars on my once pure yellow face are hereby atoned for with the destruction of your finely ordered system of stylized fonts and clear photos.

Chapel requirements terminated

In the interest of saving time and money chapel requirements end

For those of you who often end each term with a huge chapel fine, your day has come. Gene Schandorff, progressive campus chaplain and friend to all, has suggested that the 94-95 school year should mark a change in the chapel system.

The team of reformers on campus this term has pointed out that the cost of printing chapel cards and of keeping track of chapel records is unnecessary and is not cost effective. They have actually pointed to the chapel cards as a prime example of one of the inefficiencies NNC is guilty of.

Chaplain Schandorff responded to this by saying, "I've felt this way all along. It is my opinion that chapel should be something that students want to come to. When it is a requirement, it is looked at as a chore and true worship is difficult."

In addition to the elimination of chapel cards and record keeping, those who have had to file for chapel reductions in the past will be relieved of the burden of trying to prove they have legitimate reasons for not attending chapel. Chaplain Schandorff went on to say that next year is to be a "test year, so don't get too thrilled just yet."

Although the team suggested that chapel was unnecessary altogether, Schandorff made it clear that he felt that "heathen scum have no place in suggesting that a chaplain doesn't understand what is important."

Administrative heads chuckled at the idea but said that chapel is safe for the time being.

To ensure that chapel does not die out from lack of attendance, Schandorff is planning an exciting array of speakers who are willing to come at low cost, and he plans to present several exciting series of his own.

Some of these speakers will include Rob "The Human Plant" Barber who has a testimony about his conversion from gardener of sin to green-thumb Christian and Burton Thomas, an outstanding athlete who almost made it into the NBA twenty years ago and is now under consideration by the Dallas Mavericks for the position of aide to the assistant coach.

Schandorff has already prepared several series and has ideas of several more to fill in the spaces between guest speakers. An enthusiastic Schandorff exclaimed, "I can't wait to do my five week series on the book of Numbers and its impact on the lives of growing Christians! I'm also working on a four week series on the book of Jude. This is going to be a great time for all who attend, you can be sure!"

As an added incentive, there will be more student-run chapels than ever before, maybe even once a week.

NNC gets quick fix with Jiffy Lube

By D.M. ZIRSCHKY
JIFFY LUBE WRITER OF THE WEEK

The NNC Board of Regents voted last week during a special session in Tahiti to accept a large cash donation by the Jiffy Lube Corporation.

Jiffy Lube is the second largest automotive lube, oil change, and tune-up corporation in the nation with guaranteed service in twenty minutes or less or your money back.

The acceptance of the $2 million grant marks the first time NNC has ever accepted a sizable sum of money from a secular organization.

When asked what prompted the Regents to accept Jiffy Lube's offer, Regent Chair Monte Chitwood said, "Jiffy Lube is dedicated to service, and committed to change in their own field. We feel that these goals are in harmony with, and not unlike, those of NNC."

However, sources tell The Crusader that the decision was largely influenced by Jiffy Lube's offer to service Chitwood's Cadillac every 3000 miles for life.

According to Chitwood, the contribution will be used to begin construction on NNC's new fine arts building which will be duly named the Jiffy Lube Hall of Fine Arts.

Sources also tell The Crusader that, in light of the Regent's acceptance of the Jiffy Lube contribution, professor Ed Crawford is actively seeking the support of the Coors Corporation in funding the Wesley Center for Applied Theology.

Rush club hits campus

By D.M. ALVIS

In their last meeting, ASNNC voted unanimously to instate an official "RushClub," including Rush Limbaugh t-shirts and a small "Rush Room" in the corner of the North Dining Room.

The idea actually was proposed through an unsigned letter to the Crusader.

Since it could not be published unsigned, it was shelved. An unnamed Senator found the letter and spearheaded the movement until it reached the Senate's agenda.

Due to more pressing priorities, the proposition was overlooked until now. With third term only into its second week, business has slowed enough to allow for leisure items like this to surface.

The opening ceremonies of the "RushClub" will feature Mr. Rush Limbaugh himself in a face to face debate with Dr. Steve Shaw. The debate will feature issues like Hilary's "Rodham and Gomorrah" Health Care Reform, the Whitewater Scandal, and (the inevitable) tax increases of 1994. Tentative dates for the debate are Friday, May 6 or Saturday, May 7.

Dr. Shaw was not available for comment, but inside sources say that recent adjunct professor Karl Brooks volunteered his counterpart Shaw to do the debate.

"It will be interesting to see such contradictory, yet dually intellectual, political wit head to head in this type of setting," commented Brooks.

In correspondence with Limbaugh (via CompuServe), our nameless Senator said that he (Limbaugh) is "ecstatic to travel to Idaho" and that he is "equally excited to see conservatism still in the heart of many towns and communities in the Northwest."

In order to bring Limbaugh to NNC, the First Call concert has been postponed to a much later date. Tickets for the debate will be sold for $10 ($5 with SAC). The event will be held in the Science Lecture Hall, unless rising interest forces activities to the gym.

The debate will be filmed, compliments of Ed-Media, for "Rush Limbaugh, the Television Show." Mr. Limbaugh asks that all spectators of the debate to wear NNC clothing to show pride for our school over national television.

Mediator for the debate will be Professor Gaymon Bennett. A variety of questions and statements to be used for the debate is being collected from Professor Marilyn Thompson, Professor Dennis, Professor Hull, and Professor Crawford.

Anyone willing to assist in coordination and execution of this timely and exciting event, please drop a note in Box A marked "RushClub." The proper individuals will notify you.

AC of I wins tourney bid

In a shocking announcement earlier this week, the NAIA council indicated that, while the Nampa-Caldwell area has been a superb location for the annual national basketball tournament, sufficient objections have been raised by various participants in the NAIA concerning the choice of NNC as the host of the tournament to demand a change. The council has voted to move the tournament to nearby Albertsons College of Idaho.

The greatest number of complaints received concerned the fact that a religious institution with a specific denominational affiliation was chosen as the site of the tournament.

This was viewed as favoritism on the part of a secular institution. Several influential schools threatened to withdraw from the NAIA if the tournament was not relocated.

As a compromise, the NAIA decided that the tournament would be moved only a short distance to AC of I, as this would be an acceptable location and would still allow community members to attend games. It was felt that, as a Christian institution, NNC would be understanding.

To show that the NAIA is grateful to NNC for the two years it hosted the tournament, a plaque was presented to Eric Forseth, NNC's athletic director, praising the college and the community for its support of hosting the national tournament for two consecutive years.

Three financial wizards solve NNC's budget problems

By D.M. VAIL
GUEST WRITER

The high cost of attending NNC has been the subject of a great deal of argument and discussion for as long as it has been an institution. Despite never ending complaints, the cost has continued to rise almost every year. Finally, the problem should be brought under control.

The administration and the board of trustees have hired a team of three financial wizards whose job will be to rearrange the entire structure of NNC, if need be, in an effort to make it the most efficient college it can be. They will look for the most cost effective ways for NNC to use its money and eliminate inefficiencies which result in needless costs, and hence, needless tuition increases.

Dr. Johanna Rogers, head of the team, has high hopes for the project. "From our initial survey of the project, it is apparent that a great deal of money is going, not to increase the quality of education, but to maintain a system which is not as efficient as it should be. We hope to provide a better plan by the end of this academic year so that it can be implemented for the 94-95 year. This plan will definitely reduce the amount of annual tuition increases and may even halt them altogether."

Changes have already been suggested by the team so that the efficiency of the college can be increasing as soon as possible.

It was determined that NNC has a much greater professor to student ratio than most colleges and universities worldwide. Although this adds to the level of academic excellence NNC is known for, it is not necessary, and is therefore not cost effective.

There has been a fair amount of concern among the faculty over questions of job security but the administration has refused to discuss any changes until the team has completed its study and announced the results.

One member of the administration who asked not to be quoted admitted that the possibility of a mass dismissal exists if it can be shown by the team that the level of education would not be affected by bringing the professor to student ratio closer to the national norm.

TRAPPED

The team has found in past projects that the merging of departments can provide students with the same skills that are acquired in specific departments but without the compartmentalization effect which often results from being in a highly specialized class. By taking many classes, each of which teaches a few specific skills, students put those skills in a "compartment" in their minds and encounter a great deal of difficulty when called upon to use those skills in combination with skills learned in other classes.

The team has suggested that future classes might combine compartments and their skills to produce, for example, English and Science hybrid classes which would simultaneously teach the skills normally kept far apart by the departments for an effective and useful education. On these same lines, the team has suggested that having separate departments, each with its own office and staff, results in incompatible systems and requires more money than if the entire school were a single system. Departments would meld to create an all encompassing system with only vague departmental distinctions. This will aid in reducing costs by eliminating all but a small fraction of the staff employees who work offices around campus.

Staff spokesmen are calling for the team to be thrown off campus as they have "obviously not got half a brain between them." These spokesmen object not only to the team's suggestion that the massive amount of work done among each of the department's staffs could only be done by a staff a quarter of their combined size, but that no person in his or her right mind would even attempt to tackle the job in the first place.

Dr. Donald McCallister, a member of the team, was quick to insist that these suggestions can work saying, "Don't knock it till you try it."

The previously quoted administrator showed regret that the faculty and staff would be unwilling to give a few ideas a decent chance.

He felt that most of the faculty and staff should have the college's best interests at heart and if that means making a few sacrifices then they should be willing to aid the college in any way they can, even if that means looking to the Lord for some immediate support. In a fit of rage, he finally shouted, "I'm the president! I can do whatever I want!"

Whitewater scandals threaten Clinton

The President maintains that the relationship with Scarlatti was of a one-time business nature.

BY D. M. FRALEY
SELF-PROCLAIMED STAFF
PHILOSOPHER

In a sudden and shocking development in the ongoing Whitewater affair, representatives for the Republican Party released on Sunday indisputable proof that President Clinton transferred leftover 1978 gubernatorial campaign funds into his wife's real estate investments. According to a Republican spokesman quoted in Monday's Wall Street Journal, the public investigators have discovered evidence in the form of memos dated from September 1978 to March 1994 carrying Bill Clinton's signature that "undeniably confirms that he was fully aware of all the wrongdoing".

Furthermore, the proof seems to implicate First Lady Hillary Clinton and Vice President Al Gore, as it is suspected that the initials h. c. and a. g., also found on the memos, refer to them.

In addition, the investigation unearthed an explanation for how Mrs. Clinton made $100,000 through real estate with a paltry $1,000 investment: apparently, a Mr. Luigi Scarlatti, a federal convict currently serving 15 years for money laundering, lent over $10,000 to the Clinton household for Whitewater investment purposes in 1977. The loan does not show up on any of the Clintons' tax returns, but they do not deny the loan was made. Nonetheless, they maintain that their relationship with Scarlatti (whose father is a notorious New Orleans mafioso) was of a one-time business nature.

How the investigators happened upon such irrefutable pieces of evidence as the memos is still unknown. However, it has been advanced—by people who know—that a White House aide who recently resigned amid allegations of sexual harassment turned them over out of sheer bitterness. This informant, if you will, is presently being kept under close surveillance, as she has reported receiving a number of "subtly disguised death threats". The FBI plans to insert her into its witness protection plan in the very near future.

In response to the mounting crisis, President Clinton hastily called a press conference that very evening in which he promised to address the American public Monday night at 7 p.m. So last night, in unexpected fashion, the President announced that the allegations were all true, but that he would not resign.

"I've served the people of the United States for fifteen months as a responsible, active, and ambitious chief executive," he said. "I will not let an insignificant fifteen-year old mistake deprive me of the right to make this country a better place to live. I believe that the American population understands this and will not count a youthful oversight against me. Therefore, I will not resign as President of the United States. Rather, I will submit to the wish of the people: I have scheduled a nationwide referendum for April 15. You and you alone, the citizens of our great country, will decide whether or not to place your trust in my loyalty to you. Thank you. And God bless America."

The United States' history is not filled with such occurrences; presidents don't often call on the people to vindicate and condone their sins. Anyone with an ounce of good sense knows how to vote on the 15th. Slick Willie won't get out of this one.

Russians just want Communism back

BY D.M. FRALEY
STAFF REALLY TALL GUY

It's always difficult to be aware of world happenings while in college, but as all you informed students know, Russia held its second ever free parliamentary elections this past weekend. Political previsionists were expecting the neo-Communists (who now bear the "Socialist" label) to win about 25-30 percent of the seats; instead, they gained a slim but indisputable majority of 52.5 percent. In any case, this outcome shows that Russians are basically disenchanted with Western-style capitalism. Frustration has evidently set in as Russia has not yet recovered from ex-President Boris Yeltsin's economic "shock treatment".

In rural areas, the Socialists won over 70 percent of the vote, while Muscovites were cooler toward the left-wing in their appreciation: only 28 percent of their votes went to the Socialists. Worldwide reaction to the surprise results was mixed; while Western European powers, namely Germany and France, were understandably apprehensive, China and Cuba expressed near elation at the outcome.

Boris Yeltsin, Russia's outgoing President, was so shocked by the improbability of it all that he was taken sick and was diagnosed with a severe migraine. His life is not in danger, physicians say. U.S. President Bill Clinton, though dealing with problems of his own (see article above) found time to comment on the results. "I am just as surprised as everyone else. I'll try to take care of this later, if I'm still around. Hope you get well soon, Boris."

What the results mean is that the "Socialist" Party has earned the right to name Russia's next President. The frontrunner is believed to be Stepan "Stiva" Arkadyevich—a name that has a familiar ring. He is best known in the U.S. for his repeated claims concerning Russia's disputed claim to Alaska. Moreover, Mr. Arkadyevich was quoted yesterday as saying, "I believe that we Russians have a duty to fulfill our natural destiny in rebuilding a Republic that encompasses all peoples from the Baltic Sea to the Pacific Ocean—and beyond. I believe we can reestablish a grand Soviet State that will once again be a major world player."

He proceeded to thank the Russian people extensively for their obvious support of his policies and exhorted them once more to "forget the selfish capitalist desires in a joint effort to succeed in implanting a true worker's state in our beautiful homeland." Does this sound familiar?

Atoms for sale: N. Korea gets The Bomb

BY D.M. WELLS
STAFF PERCHEK

"Foreign Policy" was a key issue in this last presidential election. People thought that with foreign affairs in such turmoil they should choose a president with strong mainland policies on issues like health care. Now there is the emergence of a global nuclear war on our door step.

According to a live interview with the Secretary of Defense William Perry, North Korea definitely has two atomic bombs at this time and will have approximately a dozen by the end of the year.

From this new development, the middle eastern market of nuclear threat wannabes has entered the picture: in order to gain profits North Korea is willing to sell its weapons. The three big contenders are Lebanon, Syria, and Chad. Since North Korea has begun selling weapons, you can pick up your personal copy of "Nukes-R-Us" by calling 1-800-YO-NUKE.

President Clinton must make a decision on China's most-favored-trade-status by June 3 and stated in an off-the-record, private, personal interview at Kenebunkport that now Beijing has shown a sudden significant improvement towards its human rights performance. This decision could be the difference in the U.S.'s relationship and pull with China in order to put pressure on North Korea.

North Korea's great leader Kim Il Sung of Boys Il Sung, a North Korean capella group, has the No-Dong missile which has a range of about 600 miles. This of course was well funded by a group of Iranian official financial businessmen.

The main consensus on Capitol Hill from personal correspondents says that the U.S. should bomb the nuclear plants before the arms race turns into a marathon. The fact still remains that if U.S. interferes with North Korea, South Korea will be annihilated. The U.S. is not quite sure exactly where all of the nuclear plants are, but it feels confident that the glow of certain buildings at night should clue the bombers to the correct locations, since North Korea has left out the importance of lead protection.

As our esteemed vice-president said in a phone tele-conference "We've beaten the Koreans before, they just don't remember Pearl Harbor."

Easter fiasco in New York City

By D. M. FRALEY
OFFICIAL HYMIE STAND-IN

Some of you—especially you freshmen in Music and Art—noticed a conspicuous absence this past weekend. Early Thursday morning, the Northwesterners seized a once-in-a-lifetime opportunity and left for New York City to sing in Carnegie Hall on Easter Sunday. They toured the city and rehearsed extensively on Friday and Saturday in preparation for a Sunday afternoon performance in America's most celebrated concert hall, under the direction of today's most celebrated sacred music composer, John Rutter.

However, the two-hour program proved to be too daunting for one of the performers. Succumbing to acute emotional stress and fatigue, ASNNC presidential candidate and all-around good guy Will Bennett fainted twenty minutes into Mozart's Coronation Mass—a mere ten minutes before the end of the performance.

As the singers began the "Sanctus," the next-to-last portion of the Mass, Will lost consciousness and fell forward from the back row, taking eight other singers and the conductor with him into the orchestra pit twenty feet below the platform. Fortunately, the violinists saw them coming and reacted swiftly, casting aside their instruments and their bows just in time in order to safely break the fall of the panicking performers.

Four Northwesterners, two NYU singers, and Mr. Rutter sustained minor injuries following the incident. As of Sunday evening, they were listed in fair condition in New York's Urban Charity Hospital and all were released the next morning.

Bennett is in serious but stable condition after suffering a concussion and four broken bones. Miraculously, he is scheduled to be released and cleared for travel on Friday. For concerned students, a get-well card is available for signing in the Crusader office (upstairs in the Student Center) today from noon until 6 p.m.. According to inside sources, Mr. Swanson has instructed all Northwesterners to deny the incident ever took place, due to the evident embarrassment that the leaking of such a story would cause.

State of Texas split

Under an accord reached Saturday, the Texas state government will allow former NNC student Chucky BonDurant to officially secede from the state. BonDurant has been holed up on a 12-acre ranch for the last three months and finally achieved his lifelong dream of owning one of the United States after threatening a hunger strike late last week. In a surprise move late Sunday afternoon, BonDurant unwittingly attempted to name the new "state" Texas, but was thwarted by legislators who proved the name was already in use. According to BonDurant, he is still planning to apply for the following names: "Virginia," "Little Singapore," and "Soccer Ball."

Taco Bell executives locate Nampa as site of new franchise

By D.M. VAIL
STAFF HYMIE-FETCHER

Sometimes everyone needs a bit of dining variety. Students are prevented from eating at even modestly priced restaurants very often and so they are constantly looking for good food at very affordable prices. Until now, there have been few such establishments near campus.

Taco Bell has purchased the lot of land across the street from Chapman Hall and plans to begin building within a month for a projected opening date in June. The owner of this particular franchise is local businessman Eugene Siefert who has long felt that there should be a Taco Bell in every city across the nation. When the opportunity presented itself to open a store of his own so near to a veritable gold mine such as NNC, he jumped at the opportunity. For years, NNC has refused to consider selling the plot of land in question every taxes but was not giving anything back to the college. On the other hand, the profits from the sale could be invested to create scholarships or to reduce the regular tuition increases.

"Everyone knows that tacos will never replace the hamburger in the modern fast food business. The fad will fade and Jack in the Box will rise above the ashes of its competitors!"

Jack In the Box representative

but at a suggestion from the team of reformers on campus, it was agreed that the land was costing the college annual property taxes of its competitors!" Mr. Siefert responded with a simple smile.

NNC students, frustrated by the lack of modestly priced restaurants, are now able to enjoy a budget-friendly alternative to Marriott-style dining

Hagood tries to ban unitards

By D.M. FLETCHER
SPORTS EDITOR

Northwest Nazarene President Richard Hagood called for a ban of the Crusader track team's new unitard uniforms Monday.

"I feel that the uniforms not only disgrace our institution, but those types of clothing should not be worn in public," stated Hagood.

Hagood added, "Sure, unitards are fine for wearing around the house. In fact I've been known to wear one myself, say while barbecuing or mowing the lawn, but they definitely don't belong within the realm of competitive collegiate athletics."

The unitards themselves are as old as the sport of track. They were previously worn in the late 1500's by Conquistadors and were known as "wigamwompus" (an Indian name meaning "silly looking tight things").

Later, the Greek name "unitardus" was given to the sleek outfits when the the East Germans needed a name for their new team apparel. By breaking the word down, modern wordologists finally have come to understand the real meaning of the word. The first part "uni" is the prefix for the word uniform, whereas the second part of the word "tard" is derived from the word leotard. Hence, people who wear these uniforms look like skinny ballerinas whose mothers don't know what size clothes to buy for them.

Hagood has vowed to return the unitard status to where it belongs--in the home. By passing a bill to have all incoming and underage students sign a "no unitard on campus" contract, Hagood hopes to eliminate the possibility of further embarrassment for our fine school.

Saders singing same old song

By D.M. FLETCHER

The NNC men's basketball team has recently signed Demetrius Wesche, a 7'2" center, to play for the Workin' Crusaders next season.

Wesche is the nephew of NNC professor Dr. Lilburn Wesche, and has spent the last two years honing his game on the playgrounds of southside Chicago.

"Demetrius is a great talent," said Coach Ed Weidenbach, "He is the type of talent that only comes around once every year... we fully expect him to play until at least Christmas break."

Wesche averaged 26.4 points a game last year in a church league as well as an astounding 17.3 rebounds. On his game, Wesche said, "I really owe my skills to my uncle Lilburn. He used to take me to the rack every Thanksgiving when I was young. I wanted to beat him so bad that I stepped up my game and worked hard until I could beat him."

NNC offered Wesche a full scholarship as well as a Mitsubishi 3000GT and spending money.

"We had to give up a lot," said assistant coach Rich Sanders, "but if he is even half the player that Lilburn is, then we have ourselves a bargain."

Swapp and Seaney Record Record

Senior shortstop Pat Swapp from Anacortes, Washington, and senior outfielder Jim Seaney of Tillamook, Oregon, have recently completed their first album to be released May 1, 1994.

Swapp, formerly of the Seattle band Yellow Dog, joined Seaney in song when they realized their untapped talent was too great to be ignored.

The new CD, entitled "Pat and Jim Sing the Blues," is a mix of R and B, rap, reach the top of the blues charts before the end of the year.

"Their sound is very smooth and rhythmic," said T-Boo Ted Marshal of Encore Records. "We at Encore jumped at the chance to sign these two artists to our label. Their work is rough edged, yet inspiring. I mean, get real, these guys have jammed with the likes of Clapton, Springsteen, Humperdink, and Floyd."

After the upcoming baseball season, the two musicians plan to tour the nation with their "16 Tons and What Do Ya Get? Tour."

Other songs on the new album include "Davey Was an 'illigitimate son,'" "Billy Was an 'illigitimate son,'" "Funky Fresh Party Dude," "Sixteen Tons (Remix)," and "Wake up, Rod (Harp and Cello Solo)."

"To be involved with such a project really gives me a feeling of pride for my people," said Swapp. "To be able to overcome 'The Man' and work with a professional like Seaney is simply a dream come true... it's just a chance that I never got in the Yellow Dog years."

The album will be available in all Shopko stores starting at midnight, May 1, 1994 (Come early, lines are expected to be long).

Good news for all those Chocaholics out there

For as long as we can remember, one thing has always tasted

our views

better than anything else: Chocolate! Why, we asked ourselves, must this thing of supreme delight be bad for us? Was it cosmically destined to torture us until our dying days? We thought so.

That's why we could not believe our eyes when we read a recent study conducted by graduate students at Stanford University. Our minds balked at the news which stared us in the collective face. There, in black and white, were the metabolic effects of many common dessert items, including chocolate. "Chocolate has been shown repeatedly to increase the body's rate of fat catabolism resulting in a gradual decrease in total body fat." We had to read on. "When taken at a daily rate of approximately 4 oz. (or one average chocolate bar), the optimum effect was achieved in human subjects."

Hallelujah! In other words, we could eat one Hershey Bar a day and gain the figures we only dream of. Perhaps Marriott could eventually add a chocolate bar to its extensive array of fine dining options. In any case, to all those chocaholics out there we say this: eat, shrink, and grow skinny.

Caning our way to better behavior

The practice of caning, or "power-spanking," is a popular form of punishment in the small nation of Singapore. There, certain criminals are sentenced to undergo a set amount of lashes from a martial arts expert with a four-foot bamboo pole. Victims suffer permanent scars, heavy bleeding, and often go into shock after only a few blows. For these reasons, caning is considered a particularly effective method of deterring crime.

Unfortunately, caning has gotten a bad rap. The current case of "An American Vandal in Singapore" has flushed out all the bleeding hearts who come close to believing that criminals should be nurtured rather than suffer the consequences of their actions. Instead of making a solid statement of zero-tolerance for crime, our government verges on protecting the rights of the criminals to a greater degree than the rights of the victims they abuse.

The American justice system should take a long, hard look at caning as a viable option for criminal punishment. Picture, if you will, one of those countless little "gangstas" finally getting the short end of the stick that they deserve. Maybe then those stupid giant pants with crotches that hang to the knees and waists that could encompass an entire high school class will serve a purpose -- drop 'em, please, and assume the position.

COMMENTARY

Read this! It's Ryan's column

pittsof hell

A blown-up quote usually goes in this little space right here, doesn't it?

We are embarrassed to admit that Opinions Editor Ryan Pitts is actually nothing but a puppet being manipulated by Managing Editor D. M. Bomar. As Ryan is incapable of holding opinions of his own, his regular column is merely a vehicle used to push Bomar's fiendish agenda. We apologize for the inconvenience caused by Bomar's absence, and assure all readers that this column will return, in its entirety, next week.

This edition of "The Crude-Satyr" features a fun game for you to play. In the spirit of the immensely popular "Where's Waldo?" we proudly present the inaugural edition of "Where's Bomar?" Take a look, because this page is actually a clever collage with many of your favorite NNC celebrities strategically hidden within. See if you can find these personalities: Dr. Lilburn Wesche, John Nordstrom, Dr. Steve Shaw, Jeff Gunstream, E. Daniel Freeborn, Gene Schandorff, Lance Nelson, President Richard Haggood, Ed Castledine, former ASNNC President Rosco Williamson, the English professors, and the big kahuna -- Dave Bomar himself!

As his eyes grew accustomed to the dark, Death suddenly noticed his girlfriend sitting with Dr. Jack Kevorkian.

"Mmmmm ... interesting ... interesting ... I'd say we taste a little like chicken."

Failed marketing ploy.

Hot off the press, the very first edition of the Desert Island Times caused the newspaper to quickly fold.
